From the days of King George II in 1727, the Wyon's served England's monarchs as designers and engravers of royal coinage and seals. The American branch of the Wyon family selected an 1839 coin featuring Sir John Vanbrugh to serve as an identifier of its insurance business. The back of the coin, designed by Alfred Benjamin Wyon, grandfather of Rex Wyon, features an illustration of Blenheim Palace, the 1874 birthplace of Winston Churchill.

Rex Wyon, Inc. was incorporated in 1972 as a general and excess lines insurance agency licensed to transact business in the states of New York, New Jersey, Connecticut, Pennsylvania and North Carolina.

Based in New York City, Rex Wyon Inc. has four operating divisions: The Commercial Insurance Division; The Personal Insurance Division; Captive Services Division and Employee Benefits Division.

In its role as an insurance services company, Rex Wyon Inc. provides insurance through several national insurance carriers including Zurich North America Financial Enterprises, Chubb Group of Insurance Companies and St. Paul Travelers Companies.

The company has particular strength in the creation of insurance products and services for community banks, a market in which it has specialized since 1974. On a state wide basis, RWI provides insurance coverages to approximately 26% of all New York Community banks.

RWI's industry commitment and involvement was demonstrated in 1986 when it became apparent that shrinking capacity, restricted coverage, and escalating rates in the marketplace for directors' and officers' liability insurance made this necessary coverage unavailable. RWI determined that a vehicle could be established which would make its creators less vulnerable to the peaks and valleys of the insurance cycle; would support and help stabilize the commercial market and would generate some much needed additional capacity. The vehicle, a captive company, First Monetary Mutual Limited, was incorporated as a mutual insurance company in Bermuda in 1986. First Monetary is currently owned by more than 40 New York and Pennsylvania community banks.
